Engaging With Perpetrators Of Domestic

Our interventions support perpetrators in the early stages of abuse, and those using high harm behaviours. We recognise that a range of interventions are needed to meet the needs of perpetrators. We do this work by conducting research, engaging in practice and piloting new interventions, accrediting services and influencing policy.

Historically, domestic violence programs were born from the women's liberation movement of the 1970s to address the needs of female survivors, who still represent the majority of victims seeking services today. Generally, the domestic violence movement has framed its work on a gender binary with men as perpetrators and women as victims.
