I know that time is difficult to use in classing a race but so is any other method of race classification. My basic contention is that on a fast to dead track, time is a good tool to use in gaining a first approximation of the quality of a horse's performance in a particular race on a particular day, especially when it is compared with the time of all the other races.

Secrets of a top ratings man THE TIME FACTOR (Part 2)

The horse lost one length (which is approximately 1/5th of a second) = 23.1 seconds for the adjusted turn time. Below is another horse in that same race: 22 4 45 4 110 3 4 2 1. The raw turn time is the same, but this runner gained 2 lengths on the turn, so his adjusted TT is 22.3. Now a route example: 45 4 110 2 142 4 2 0 0

Here we delve into the key factors to look out for when assessing a race. Do your research. Make an assessment of what to expect of a horse in a race, while keeping an open mind about what actually does. In particular, consider those factors that are different for a horse than previously/recently (headgear, distance, going, absence etc).

How to Assess a Horse Race | Timeform

When analysing a horse race it is important to take into consideration all of the 'external' factors such as draw, pace, trainer behaviour and sire statistics etc.Whilst these factors can all have a bearing how a runner acts under certain conditions, ultimately each animal has its own traits and preferences that can determine how close to optimal form the horse performs.
