In tort lawsuits, the injured party —referred to as the “plaintiff” in civil cases (comparable to the prosecutor in a criminal case)— seeks compensation, through the representation of a personal injury attorney, from the “defendant” for damages incurred (i.e. harm to property, health, or well-being). What is a Tort Case?

⚖ Types of Torts and Examples of Tort Cases

Torts include negligence cases and personal injury. Tort cases must prove that there was a duty, a breach of that duty, causation, and injury. Torts are a pretty broad category, and many types of cases, from physical injury to invasion of privacy, are included under the term.

Mass torts are unique cases in that there are a large number of plaintiffs versus one defendant (or maybe a few). These cases are often some of the most significant cases a law firm will handle, especially in terms of potential revenue. As 2019 begins, there are a few new or ongoing mass tort cases to watch this year.
